This NPC is likely named for the titular protagonist of Sabriel by Garth Nix, a young adult fantasy novel and the first one in the Old Kingdom series. It's an odd choice of NPC for it, and the NPC's title is unrelated, but it's not a common name and the character is relevant. She's a young adult who unexpectedly has to step up and go out into the world to rescue her father. There's a lot of ...

Garth Nix does a terrific job at merging both medieval and 20th century elements into one cohesive world. In addition, the magic system is intricate, yet delightfully easy to follow. Above all, I absolutely adore Sabriel as a protagonist. She's smart, strong-willed, well-balanced, and likable. Also, who doesn't love a talking cat sidekick, especially one that's sarcastic and sassy? In ...
